

17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31

8 7 8 3 8 6 7 6 5 4 6 7

make_repeat_tied_notes() 11° / E 13° / D \flat 11° / E \flat

mp ff mf p

make_repeat_tied_notes() 9° / E 9° / E \flat 9° / E \flat

mp ff mf p

(1/2 clt) 5° / E 5° / E \flat

7:6 9:8 9:7 8:7 8:6 7:5 5:4 9:7

mp ff mf p

1/2 clt III

9:8 8:7 8:6 6:5 8:6 8:7

mp f p

[K.10]

46 47 48 49 50 51 52 53 54

$\text{♩} = 117$

8 8 8 8 8 8

make_repeat_tied_notes(do_not_rewrite_meters=True)
T poss.

Vn. I

p

make_repeat_tied_notes(do_not_rewrite_meters=True)
T poss.

Vn. II

p

($\frac{1}{2}$ clt)

make_repeat_tied_notes(do_not_rewrite_meters=True)
T poss.

Va.

p

T poss.

Vc.

A

So all eyes from bad to worse till in the end he ceased if not to see to look (about him or more closely) and set out to take thought. To this end for want of a stone on which to sit like Walther and cross his legs the best he could do was stop dead and stand stock still which after a moment of hesitation he did and of course sink his head as one deep in meditation which after another moment of hesitation he did also. But soon weary of vainly delving in those remains he moved on through the long hoar grass resigned to not knowing where he was or how he got there or where he was going or how to get back to whence he knew not how he came. So on unknowing

Stirrings Still — 24 — Bača